REPORT on the BIODIVERSITY ECONOMY INDABA - EAST LONDON 8 to 10 March 2018
By Barry York

Creating awareness about the lack of transformation within the wildlife economy was the most important outcome of the Biodiversity Economy Indaba held at East London from the 8 to 10 March 2018.

The Minister of Environmental Affairs remains strongly supportive of hunting and believes that the sustainable use of natural resources must be shared to combat unemployment, poverty and inequality in our country. She said the hunting industry was not transformed and that well-planned initiatives and innovations were required on collaborations towards achieving transformation.

Transformation was also identified as not just a white-black issue, but meaningful transformation required more user-friendly legislation and streamlined administration that could facilitate future economic growth within the wildlife sector.

The negative economic impact following the zero quota on leopard hunting in 2016 and 2017. Was discussed. Unfortunately, no clear answers were given, but the possibility of issuing leopard hunting permits shortly, was raised. PHASA pledged R5 000 per leopard towards its conservation research and transformation fund.

Twenty five percent of Kruger National Park is under land claims. SANParks is under pressure from the claimants to show meaningful economic benefits from the use of this land.

PHASA's offer to investigate co-operation between its members and new landholders to develop the economic potential of wildlife on their land through meaningful and mutually beneficial arrangements, was well received.

The following individuals / organisations (comments included) indicated that they wish to develop closer ties with PHASA. PHASA members who want to get involved are welcome to contact them directly:

Brussels, 9 March 2018 - There are "winners" and "losers" in the conservation of wildlife in Africa! H.E. the Ambassador of Zimbabwe proclaimed at the conference "Keep Calm and Let Africa Take the Lead. The EU-Africa Dialogue: Supporting communities in wildlife conservation" on 6 March 2018 at the European Parliament in Brussels. He stated that Southern African nations were amongst the "winners" with increasing national wildlife populations.

At this conference, organised by MEP Karl-Heinz Florenz, President of the European Parliament's Intergroup "Biodiversity, Hunting, Countryside", representatives of the wildlife management authorities, parliaments, embassies and non-governmental organisations from Zimbabwe, South Africa and Namibia explained why the EU must "Keep Calm and Let Africa Take the Lead" in decisions about the management and conservation of Africa's wildlife. The Leopard & Its Endangered Species Ranking

~Courtesy of TGA

In response to a petition received by the American US Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS), suggesting that the Service should reclassify the leopard's status throughout its range, from 'threatened' to 'endangered', in terms of the American Endangered Species Act (ESA), on 20 December 2017 the Service issued a document (ID: FWS-HQ-WS-2016-0131-0742) entitled "Endangered and Threatened Species: 90-Day Findings for Five Species". One of those species was the leopard.

This response has been sent to Ms. Janine Van Norman at FWS HQ as requested.
